- EUR/USD extends the rebound from support in the 1.06-handles after our momentum divergence buy signals triggered there. The soft CPI print reinforced the trend, but we still expect material selling pressure in the 1.09-handel resistance zone. Look for that area to cap the summer range.
- GBP/USD push above the 1.2861-1.2892 range highs give short-term bulls scope to extend the rally into the 1.30-1.3174 resistance zone. We think the move will fade there.
- USD/JPY triggers a set of short-term sell signals with the late-week reversal, but still holds above key trend support at 157.366-157.807. Given the maturing nature of the longer-term rally as signified by lower-frequency momentum divergence signals, we would take a downside break very seriously. The first area of medium-term support sits at 151.112-0151.863.
- AUD/USD extends the spring-summer breakout rally and puts broader range resistance into view at 0.6819-0.6969. We expect the move to fade there and set up a downside reversal, but for now and as long as the pair holds above 0.6657-0.6681 trend support, bulls keep the agenda.

EUR/USD moves into the upper end of the range; look for selling pressure at 1.09-handle resistance

EUR/USD extends the rebound from the upper end of a large support zone in the 1.06-handle area that includes the 1.0674 Oct 2023 trend line and 1.0669 Apr 78.6% retrace (Figure 1). That reversal came with a cluster of our pattern-based algorithmic buy signals, which favored mean reversion to higher prices. The trend was reinforced by the move through the tightly clustered moving averages, which likely triggered trend-following flows. It was further bolstered by the softer-than-expected US CPI report. While the short-term move has had more of an impulsive character than we expected as a result, we still view it as counter to the broader medium-term trend and expect significant selling pressure near resistance that includes the 1.0935 Dec 61.8% retrace, 1.0978 Jul 2023 trend line, 1.0981 Mar high, and 1.103 Oct-Apr .618 swing objective. That area has defined the upper end of the trading range in 2024, and we think it will continue to do so through the summer. Ultimately, we expect a downside reversal and resumption of the longer-term bear trend in the fall, a continuation of the trend that took the pair into the 2023-2024 triangle consolidation pattern. To the downside, a break below the 1.0778-1.08 tactical pattern breakout would derail the bullish trend momentum. Other support in the 1.06-handles include the Apr low. We expect an eventual break of that support and for the pair to challenge longer-term range support in the 1.04-handles into the fourth quarter. We expect the pair to drop to 1.01-1.02 targets over the longer term, where we think the market can set a cyclical trend reversal.

Figure 1: EUR/USD extends the rebound from support in the 1.06-handles after our momentum divergence buy signals triggered there. The soft CPI print reinforced the trend, but we still expect material selling pressure in the 1.09-handle resistance zone. Look for that area to cap the summer range.

Cable unexpectedly breaks range; next resistance rests at 1.30-1.3174

GBP/USD unexpectedly breaks above the 1.2861-1.2892 2024 range highs and turns our attention to the next area of medium-term resistance that includes the 1.30 Apr channel, 1.30843 Oct 2023 channel, 1.314 summer 2023 high and 1.3174 Oct-Apr equal swings objective (Figure 2). We suspect the rally will decelerate and bearishly reverse from that area. In turn, that would keep the pair within the tightening consolidation pattern that has been forming since the second half of 2023. We will wait to see high-frequency trend deceleration as the market nears that resistance to build conviction in that view. For now, it is a rally until proven otherwise as long as the pair maintains this week's pattern breakout. On the downside, the 1.2594-1.2708 cluster of moving averages and the Apr channel now mark medium-term trend support.

Figure 2: GBP/USD push above the 1.2861-1.2892 range highs give short-term bulls scope to extend the rally into the 1.30-1.3174 resistance zone. We think the move will fade there.

USD/JPY triggers a cluster of short-term sell signals but still holds key trend support at 157.366-157.807

USD/JPY bearishly pressures the 157.80 50-day moving average and 157.807 Dec 2023 channel trend line (Figure 3). Bears have not been able to build upon initial impulses lower in 2024, and time will tell if this time is different. Given the pair's resilience it is hard to get carried away with a bearish outlook at this point, but if that support gives way, we would treat it very seriously. The Apr-May price pattern looks like an ending diagonal, a formation that implies a maturing longer-term trend. Furthermore, the monthly signals we illustrated in our last update have done a good job marking the end of bull cycles in the past decades. With those signals now flashing, we think a downside break could build momentum quickly. We think a breakdown would lead to a sharp drop to the first round of medium-term support at 151.723-153.675 which includes the Dec 38.2% retrace, 200-day moving average, and most importantly, the 2022-2023 peaks. We ultimately expect the pair to eventually break that support into 2025, the speed at which that happens will be determined by the economic data and its resulting impact on the speed at which the UST rally accelerates over that period. On the top side, a resumption of the USD/JPY advance would turn our attention to resistance at the 1.6369 Jul 2023-Mar 2024 range objective, 164.212 Dec channel, 164.97 Jan-Nov 2023 equal swings objective, and 166.903 Dec 2023 extended channel.

Figure 3: USD/JPY triggers a set of short-term sell signals with the late-week reversal, but still holds above key trend support at 157.366-157.807. Given the maturing nature of the longer-term rally as signified by lower-frequency momentum divergence signals, we would take a downside break very seriously. The first area of medium-term support sits at 151.112-0151.863.

AUD/USD extends breakout rally and eyes 0.6819-0.6969 resistance zone

AUD/USD builds upon the springtime breakout from the Jan-May base pattern despite the fact that other cyclically sensitive global markets are not validating the move (copper/gold ratio, cyclical equities, etc.). Despite that, the technical setup favors a continued bullish outlook and a test of broader range resistance that includes the 0.6819 Jan 2023 61.8% retrace, 0.6872-0.6901 Jun-Dec 2023 highs, 0.6937 Feb-May pattern objective, 0.6927 Apr channel, and 0.6969 Oct-Apr equal swings objective (Figure 4). We are looking for the advance to fade in that area and set up a medium-term bearish trend reversal. Bigger picture, we think the pair has the potential to fully retrace the rallies from the Oct and Apr lows, but we will need to see high-frequency trend deceleration near noted resistance as the first sign to build strong conviction in that view. For now, bulls keep the agenda while above the 0.6657-0.6681 50-day moving average and Apr channel trend line. Other moving average support rests at 0.6595 and 0.6572.

Figure 4: AUD/USD extends the spring-summer breakout rally and puts broader range resistance into view at 0.6819-0.6969. We expect the move to fade there and set up a downside reversal, but for now and as long as the pair holds above 0.6657-0.6681 trend support, bulls keep the agenda.

Explanation of Equity Research Ratings, Designations and Analyst(s) Coverage Universe:
J.P. Morgan uses the following rating system: Overweight (over the duration of the price target indicated in this report, we expect this stock will outperform the average total return of the stocks in the Research Analyst's, or the Research Analyst's team's, coverage universe); Neutral (over the duration of the price target indicated in this report, we expect this stock will perform in line with the average total return of the stocks in the Research Analyst's, or the Research Analyst's team's, coverage universe); and Underweight (over the duration of the price target indicated in this report, we expect this stock will underperform the average total return of the stocks in the Research Analyst's, or the Research Analyst's team's, coverage universe. NR is Not Rated. In this case, J.P. Morgan has removed the rating and, if applicable, the price target, for this stock because of either a lack of a sufficient fundamental basis or for legal, regulatory or policy reasons. The previous rating and, if applicable, the price target, no longer should be relied upon. An NR designation is not a recommendation or a rating. In our Asia (ex-Australia and ex-India) and U.K. small- and mid-cap Equity Research, each stock's expected total return is compared to the expected total return of a benchmark country market index, not to those Research Analysts' coverage universe. If it does not appear in the Important Disclosures section of this report, the certifying Research Analyst's coverage universe can be found on J.P. Morgan's Research website, https://www.jpmorganmarkets.com.
