

FX Technical Update

Broad dollar advance stalls; look for further consolidation and a broadening of the tactical range

- EUR/USD grinds lower into the 1.0844 200-day moving average and 1.0836 Dec-Jan .618 swing objective. Next support at 1.0713-1.0724. Look for the 1.10 area to cap short-term rebounds.
- The EUR/JPY consolidates below 162.05 resistance and above 158.64-159.25 key short-term support. A break below the latter would derail the short-term bullish trend momentum. We are looking for the market to bearishly reverse from 162- to 164-handle resistance levels.
- Cable continues to carve out a potential short-term distribution pattern after the fourth-quarter rally decelerated near the 1.2726 Jul 61.8% retrace. Sustained closes below 1.2611 pattern support, 1.2526 Oct 38.2% retrace, and nearby cluster of moving averages would confirm the downside trend reversal.
- The USD/JPY bounce from the late-year test of the 141.81 Sep-Nov pattern objective stalled stalls below the 149.442 Nov 78.6% retrace and 150.15 internal trend line. We are watching for a bearish trend reversal to set up, but don't see clear evidence of one just yet. Key tactical support rests at 145.65-146.97.
- AUD/USD bounces from key support at 0.6499-0.6525 but remains below the 0.664 Jan pattern breakdown and 0.6655 50-day moving average. We expect more consolidation, but ultimately expect the pair to continue the decline within the broader range after the Dec rejection of 0.6781-0.6901 pattern resistance.

EUR/USD grinds lower into nearby support levels; look for further consolidation over the near term

EUR/USD grinds lower and repeatedly tests the 1.0844 200-day moving average and 1.0836 Dec-Jan .618 swing objective (Figure 1). While the market has marginally expanded the lower end of the holding pattern, it continues to consolidate on the heels of the slide from the 1.1142 Dec peak and below the 1.0920 50-day moving average. We suspect the market is set for further backing and filling over the near term, which can see the new range broaden to other resistance near 1.10 and a second layer of support at 1.0713-1.0735. As we expect a broader risk-off tone to eventually take hold this year, we are more biased to fade the upper end of that developing range than the lower. In the months ahead, we think the pair will eventually release lower to test the 1.0451 Oct low and 1.0405 Sep 2022 50% retrace. We think the market will go on to break that support and extend to 1.00-1.02 targets in 2024. If we are incorrect, an upside break through 1.10-handle resistance will turn our attention to the 1.1275 2021 61.8% retrace and 1.1292 Oct-Dec equal swings objective.

Figure 1: EUR/USD grinds lower into the 1.0844 200-day moving average and 1.0836 Dec-Jan .618 swing objective. Next support at 1.0713-1.0724. Look for the 1.10 area to cap short-term rebounds.

EUR/JPY short-term setback holds 158.67-159.25 tactical support; look for a bearish reversal to form

EUR/JPY consolidates above 158.67-159.25 key tactical support after the advance from the 153.86 Dec low rejected the 162.05 Nov 78.6% retrace and internal trend line resistance (Figure 2). The near-term momentum stays positive while above the 50-day moving average, 100-day moving average, and Dec-Jan pattern breakout area that all sit in the nearby support layer. That said, we are still looking for the pair to top out below the aforementioned resistance and cluster of levels in the 162- to 164-handles. Bigger picture, we view the past seven months of price action as a broad distribution pattern, with the current rebound marking the right shoulder of that head-and-shoulders top. Medium-term bears would gain traction with a break below the 156.41 200-day moving average and 154.03 Jan 2023 38.2% retrace.

Figure 2: The EUR/JPY consolidates below 162.05 resistance and above 158.64-159.25 key short-term support. A break below the latter would derail the short-term bullish trend momentum. We are looking for the market to bearishly reverse from 162- to 164-handle resistance levels.

Cable forms a potential distribution pattern after the fourth-quarter rally

Another week of range bound price action leaves GBP/USD in what looks like a developing distribution pattern. It follows the fourth-quarter advance and subsequent deceleration near the 1.2726 Jul 61.8% retrace. That deceleration triggered our momentum divergence systematic sell signals, which continue to favor mean reversion over the near term (Figure 3, red arrows). Key short-term pattern support rests at 1.2611. A break would seek the 1.2526 Oct 38.2% retrace and nearby cluster of moving averages. In our view, a move through that set of levels would put medium-term bears back in control as it would confirm a broader trend reversal. Next support rests at the 1.2339 Oct 61.8% retrace and Oct pattern high. While our bearish medium-term outlook for cable favors an eventual break through that support, we need to see bearish trend dynamics build after the 4Q23 rally put our view on the back foot. Bigger picture, we expect an eventual test of support near 1.20 and then 1.16-1.18 in the months/quarters ahead. Conversely, a continued rally would seek next resistance at the 1.2915 Jul 78.6% retrace, which is followed by longer-term resistance surrounding the 1.314 Jul 2023 peak.

Figure 3: Cable continues to carve out a potential short-term distribution pattern after the fourth-quarter rally decelerated near the 1.2726 Jul 61.8% retrace. Sustained closes below 1.2611 pattern support, 1.2526 Oct 38.2% retrace, and nearby cluster of moving averages would confirm the downside trend reversal.

USD/JPY stalls below 149.442-150.15 resistance but holds 145.65-146.97 tactical support for now

The USD/JPY rebound from the 141.81 Sep-Nov reversal pattern measured move objective has stalled below the 149.442 Nov 78.6% retrace and 150.15 internal trend line after extending further than expected in Jan (Figure 4). Despite that overshoot, we are still on the lookout for a bearish reversal from nearby levels. While the temporary loss of upside momentum is a step in the right direction, in our view, we do not yet see clear evidence of a reversal pattern. Another failed attempt to push through aforementioned resistance would provide that evidence and likely trigger short-term sell signals on our pattern-based model. Bears would gain traction with a break through the 145.65-146.97 key short-term support cluster. Bigger picture, we are looking for subsequent weakness to break through the 140.25 Dec low and 139.585 Jan 50% retrace in the months ahead and retrace further into the 2H22-current trading range. On the upside, longer-term resistance remains at the 151.945 2022-2023 twin peaks.

Figure 4: The USD/JPY bounce from the late-year test of the 141.81 Sep-Nov pattern objective stalled below the 149.442 Nov 78.6% retrace and 150.15 internal trend line. We are watching for a bearish trend reversal to set up, but don't see clear evidence of one just yet. Key tactical support rests at 145.65-146.97.

AUD/USD consolidates above key support at 0.6499-0.6525 and below 0.664-0.6655 tactical resistance

China-linked equity markets and industrial commodities received a tailwind from policy-related headlines this week, but surprisingly, AUD/USD did not follow and build upon the bounce from critical support at the 0.6525 Dec low, 0.6523 Aug-Nov base highs, and 0.6499 Oct 61.8% retrace (Figure 5). That marks a key line in the sand right in the middle of the broader Mar 2023-current trading range and acted as a magnet for the pair after the Dec rejection of 0.6781-0.6901 pattern resistance. Despite the short-term bounce, the bearish trend momentum stays in gear as long as the pair is trading below the 0.664 Jan breakdown level and 0.6655 50-day moving average. Regardless of if the pair manages to push through that tactical resistance, we expect an eventual breakdown to the lower end of the broader pattern and test of the 0.617-0.6269 2022-2023 lows in the months ahead.

Figure 5: AUD/USD bounces from key support at 0.6499-0.6525 but remains below the 0.664 Jan pattern breakdown and 0.6655 50-day moving average. We expect more consolidation, but ultimately expect the pair to continue the decline within the broader range after the Dec rejection of 0.6781-0.6901 pattern resistance.

Explanation of Equity Research Ratings, Designations and Analyst(s) Coverage Universe:

J.P. Morgan uses the following rating system: Overweight [Over the next six to twelve months, we expect this stock will outperform the average total return of the stocks in the analyst’s (or the analyst’s team’s) coverage universe.] Neutral [Over the next six to twelve months, we expect this stock will perform in line with the average total return of the stocks in the analyst’s (or the analyst’s team’s) coverage universe.] Underweight [Over the next six to twelve months, we expect this stock will underperform the average total return of the stocks in the analyst’s (or the analyst’s team’s) coverage universe.] Not Rated (NR): J.P. Morgan has removed the rating and, if applicable, the price target, for this stock because of either a lack of a sufficient fundamental basis or for legal, regulatory or policy reasons. The previous rating and, if applicable, the price target, no longer should be relied upon. An NR designation is not a recommendation or a rating. In our Asia (ex-Australia and ex-India) and U.K. small- and mid-cap equity research, each stock’s expected total return is compared to the expected total return of a benchmark country market index, not to those analysts’ coverage universe. If it does not appear in the Important Disclosures section of this report, the certifying analyst’s coverage universe can be found on J.P. Morgan’s research website, <https://www.jpmorganmarkets.com>.
