The broad dollar revisits the mid-Dec FOMC breakout support layer after triggering another set of pattern-based sell signals

- EUR/USD carves out a range after the Sep-Jan slide decelerated near the 1.02 Sep 2022 61.8% retrace. We still see key medium-term resistance levels clustered around 1.06.
- The 1.2486-1.2659 favored cluster of resistance levels continues to contain the GBP/USD rebound. While the market can see further consolidation on the heels of the Sep-Jan trend, we think that resistance will cap the market.
- The USD/JPY mean reversion from the 158.88 Jan high extended through our 152.555-153.03 base-case target zone as it tracked a more aggressive Treasury move to lower yields. Now, at 150.835-151.807 Fibonacci levels, next support rests at the 148.645 Dec low. Bears keep the agenda while below the 154.949 50-day moving average.
- AUD/USD triggered another set of pattern-based buy signals after the headline whipsaws early in the week. The market finds itself testing the 0.628 50-day moving average again, which marks the lower end of a key medium-term resistance cluster and what we view as a bifurcation line for the medium-term outlook.

EUR/USD ranges above 1.02 support

EUR/USD continues to trade in a broad range after the Sep-Jan slide decelerated into the 1.02 Sep 2022 61.8% retrace support layer. Nearby resistance within that range includes the 1.0461 chart inflection and 1.053 Dec 78.6% retrace. We still see the cluster of levels surrounding 1.06 as a critical medium-term resistance zone. That includes the Sep 38.2% retrace, Dec peak, 100-day moving average, and mid-Nov bearish acceleration zone (Figure 2). While one can view the Jan-Feb price action as a potential base pattern after the 4Q slide created deep oversold conditions via a consensus US-exceptionalism outlook, we would not only need to see EUR/USD pressure the 1.06 area, but also upside breakouts across an array of cyclically sensitive markets to shift that more bullish chart interpretation to the modal outlook. Alternatively, a downside break would turn our attention to longer-term support at the 1.00 4Q22 pattern objective and then the 0.99 Sep 2022 78.6% retrace.

Figure 2: EUR/USD carves out a range after the Sep-Jan slide decelerated near the 1.02 Sep 2022 61.8% retrace. We still see key medium-term resistance levels clustered around 1.06.

The GBP/USD bounce has been contained by favored resistance near 1.26

While the cable rebound from the 1.2099 Jan 13 low stays in gear, the favored cluster of overhead resistance between the 1.2489 Nov low and 1.2659 Dec 78.6% retrace has contained the pair thus far. Other levels in that zone include the 50-day moving average, Mar 2023 violated trend line, and Sep 38.2% retrace (Figure 3). We think the market can see further consolidation on the heels of the sharp Sep-Jan selloff. However, we think that resistance will continue to mark a sticking point. Monday's 1.2248 headline-whipsaw low now marks tactical support within what we assume will be a messy range for the weeks ahead. As the cable chart doesn't have the potential base-like pattern present on other dollar pair charts, we see higher prospects that cable can come under renewed pressure in the first half. The early-Jan price action overshot support in the 1.22-handles, but turned shy of the next major zone in the 1.18-handles. Given the large confluence of levels there, we suspect that will keep a floor under the pair in the first half of the year.

Figure 3: The 1.2486-1.2659 favored cluster of resistance levels continues to contain the GBP/USD rebound. While the market can see further consolidation on the heels of the Sep-Jan trend, we think that resistance will cap the market.

USD/JPY mean reversion overshoot our favored target zone as UST rally extended

USD/JPY saw a favored extension of the mean reversion to lower levels, but also overshoot our 152.555-153.03 favored target zone and extended to the 150.835-151.807 Fibonacci confluence while tracking a surprising re-acceleration to lower Treasury yields (Figure 4). While we think both markets are set to base on a near-term basis, the trend dynamics leave us with low conviction until a clear tactical reversal pattern sets up. For now, bears keep the agenda while below the 153.714 Jan 27 low and 154.948 50-day moving average. Renewed pressure would turn our attention to the 149.23 Sep 50% retrace and 148.645 Dec low. Other medium-term support sits down at the 146.495-147.172 4Q pattern breakout and Sep 61.8% retrace.

Figure 4: The USD/JPY mean reversion from the 158.88 Jan high extended through our 152.555-153.03 base-case target zone as it tracked a more aggressive Treasury move to lower yields. Now at 150.835-151.807 Fibonacci levels, next support rests at the 148.645 Dec low. Bears keep the agenda while below the 154.949 50-day moving average.

AUD/USD revisits the 50-day moving average resistance after triggering more buy signals

AUD/USD triggered another set of bullish momentum divergence signals on the heels of the early-week headline-driven whipsaw (Figure 5). The pair overshot the 0.617 Oct 2022 low but fell short of the next medium-term support at 0.6025-0.605. The chart looks increasingly like a potential bottom pattern on the heels of the sharp Sep-Jan bear trend. The 0.628 50-day moving average marks the lower end of a key cluster of levels we think define a bifurcation zone for the pair. That also includes the 0.6349 Aug low, 0.6393 2022-2024 internal trend line, and 0.6414 Sep 38.2% retrace. A sustained break above that resistance could drive a much more meaningful retracement of the multi-month decline, especially if confirmed by other cyclically sensitive markets. As it stands now, regression based analysis suggests most of those markets are currently priced for a global manufacturing PMI near 50 for the next few months.

Figure 5: AUD/USD triggered another set of pattern-based buy signals after the headline whipsaws early in the week. The market finds itself testing the 0.628 50-day moving average again, which marks the lower end of a key medium-term resistance cluster and what we view as a bifurcation line for the medium-term outlook.

Explanation of Equity Research Ratings, Designations and Analyst(s) Coverage Universe:

J.P. Morgan uses the following rating system: Overweight (over the duration of the price target indicated in this report, we expect this stock will outperform the average total return of the stocks in the Research Analyst’s, or the Research Analyst’s team’s, coverage universe); Neutral (over the duration of the price target indicated in this report, we expect this stock will perform in line with the average total return of the stocks in the Research Analyst’s, or the Research Analyst’s team’s, coverage universe); and Underweight (over the duration of the price target indicated in this report, we expect this stock will underperform the average total return of the stocks in the Research Analyst’s, or the Research Analyst’s team’s, coverage universe. NR is Not Rated. In this case, J.P. Morgan has removed the rating and, if applicable, the price target, for this stock because of either a lack of a sufficient fundamental basis or for legal, regulatory or policy reasons. The previous rating and, if applicable, the price target, no longer should be relied upon. An NR designation is not a recommendation or a rating. In our Asia (ex-Australia and ex-India) and U.K. small- and mid-cap Equity Research, each stock’s expected total return is compared to the expected total return of a benchmark country market index, not to those Research Analysts’ coverage universe. If it does not appear in the Important Disclosures section of this report, the certifying Research Analyst’s coverage universe can be found on J.P. Morgan’s Research website, <https://www.jpmorganmarkets.com>.
