Today, NVIDIA hosted its 2025 GTC Paris keynote to highlight the sovereign AI opportunities in Europe and the AI industrial revolution that is driving accelerating demand for NVIDIA's platforms and software solutions. The event underscored NVIDIA's leading position in AI/accelerated computing and its role as a one-stop solution provider with a comprehensive portfolio of silicon, software/managed cloud services, hardware systems, and a full-stack ecosystem. Sovereign AI represents an incremental revenue opportunity as countries build out their AI infrastructure for their domestic market requirements. The team expects $1.5 trillion worth of AI infrastructure build-out over the next several years. This is all incremental spending on top of the large US cloud/hyperscalers. Europe is an underserved market, but the region is stepping up its investments, and NVIDIA highlighted 20 AI factories that are being planned, including several gigawatt - class datacenters (1 gigawatt can power about 500,000 GPU dies). The team expects AI computing capacity in Europe to increase by 10x over the next two years. To support this rapid expansion, NVIDIA is collaborating with various stakeholders in the European ecosystem, such as telecommunications companies, cloud providers, neo clouds, and model developers to accelerate progress. On their hardware solutions, the team is progressing well with the ramp of its GB200 NVL 72 (1,000 systems per week) and GB300 is on track. Other Blackwell product lines targeting enterprise, AI (RTX Pro Server), personal AI (DGX Spark), and edge solutions (RTX Pro Laptop) are also in production. Given the manufacturing complexity of their AI data center products, product lead-times are now one year, which provides the team with strong demand visibility into 2026, and the team remains confident in the long-term demand trends. Regarding China, the team assumes no revenue going forward from China domestic customers. China's alternatives (Huawei XPU accelerator) are good enough given that datacenter power is more plentiful and there is less emphasis on power efficiency. In edge use cases, the team sees strong opportunities in autonomous driving, robotics, AI factories and base stations. In software/libraries, the team highlighted its 400 acceleration libraries, which help expand its markets/applications (e.g., cuLitho, cuOpt, Warp, cuOSS, Parabricks, MONAI, among others) to segments like semiconductor manufacturing, medical, and quantum computing, among many others. The team also discussed CUDA-Q, its open-source quantum development platform offering GPU-accelerated simulations. Quantum-GPU classical computing is at an inflection point now, and the team sees it potentially processing some workflows in the next 2-3 years. NVIDIA continues to be the market leader

Summary Investment Thesis and Valuation

Investment Thesis

We believe NVIDIA continues to execute across all segments. While 1H is typically seasonally weaker than 2H, we expect solid demand in PC gaming to be a strong revenue driver for the company, offsetting PC OEM, which is in secular decline. We expect the data center segment to grow strongly as hyperscale customers continue to embrace GPU-accelerated deep learning for processing large data sets. We are encouraged by strength in the automotive and enterprise segments as well, although strong adoption of autonomous driving in the market remains to be seen. We anticipate significant upside in the shares, driving our Overweight rating.

Valuation

Our Dec-25 PT of $170 assumes the stock trades at 30-35x $5.39 of earnings power in CY26. Our earnings multiple is consistent with its potential earnings CAGR of 30-35%+ over the next few years led by the continued strong datacenter growth, monetizing an incremental ~$14B of auto revenue pipeline and incremental software, licensing, and subscription revenues over the next several years.

in accelerated computing silicon/systems, software, and ecosystems. We reiterate our OW rating on NVDA.

- Sovereign AI is contributing to $1.5T of infrastructure build-out; Europe is emerging as a key growth market due to its increasing investments in AI. NVIDIA highlighted 20 AI factories that are being planned, including several gigawatt-class datacenters (1 gigawatt can power about 500,000 GPU dies). The team expects AI computing capacity in Europe to increase by 10x over the next two years. To support this rapid expansion, NVIDIA is collaborating with various stakeholders in the European ecosystem, such as telecommunications companies, cloud providers, and model developers, to accelerate progress. Countries like France, Germany, Italy, Spain, and the United Kingdom are actively developing domestic AI infrastructure in partnership with a network of technology providers.
- Physical AI and edge computing (industrial AI/ robotics/autonomous vehicles) represents the next wave of AI innovation. In edge use cases, NVIDIA identifies significant opportunities in autonomous driving, robotics, AI factories, and base stations. The team believes that humanoid robotics could become one of the largest industries ever. Currently, the deployment of robotics is constrained by programmability. NVIDIA addresses this challenge with its three-layer stack, consisting of hardware (such as the Thor chip), operating systems/transformer models, and Omniverse/digital twin technology. Today, NVIDIA announced the development of the world's first industrial AI cloud tailored for European manufacturers. The initiative aims to empower Europe's industrial leaders to accelerate various manufacturing applications, including design, engineering, simulation, factory digital twins, and robotics.
- Strong execution on supply chain management. The team is making significant progress with the ramp-up of its GB200 NVL 72 solution, achieving a production rate of 1,000 systems per week, while the GB300 remains on track. Other Blackwell product lines, including those targeting enterprise AI (RTX Pro Server), personal AI (DGX Spark), and edge solutions (RTX Pro Laptop), are also in production. Due to the manufacturing complexity of their AI data center products, the lead time is one year, providing the team with solid demand visibility into 2026. NVIDIA remains confident in the long-term demand trends and does not see any major supply constraints.
- Continue to advance its software, services, and cloud services offerings. The team has emphasized its portfolio of 400 acceleration libraries, which are instrumental in expanding its market reach and applications. These libraries, including cuLitho, cuOpt, Warp, cuOSS, Parabricks, and MONAI, cater to diverse segments such as semiconductor manufacturing, medical, and quantum computing, among others. The NVIDIA Nemotron model represents a further advancement in AI, utilizing reinforcement learning and fine-tuning to enhance model efficiencies. Additionally, the team announced the NVIDIA DGX Cloud Lepton, an AI platform that integrates global cloud providers, GPU cloud providers, GPU marketplaces, and developer local environments. This platform offers unified access to cloud AI services and GPU capacity across the NVIDIA compute ecosystem.

Valuation

Our Dec-25 PT of $170 assumes that NVIDIA trades at a 30x our Dec-25 PT of $170 assumes the stock trades at 30-35x $5.39 of earnings power in CY26. Our earnings multiple is consistent with its potential earnings CAGR of 30-35%+ over the next few years led by the continued strong datacenter growth, monetizing an incremental ~$14B of auto revenue pipeline and incremental software, licensing, and subscription revenues over the next several years.

Risks to Rating and Price Target

- Although PC gaming demand seems resilient to macroeconomic weakness, any macro uncertainty could weigh on PC gaming demand trends. Given NVDA's ~53% exposure to the PC gaming segment, any consumer PC gaming weakness poses downside risk to our estimates.
- NVIDIA's GPUs could gain lower than expected deployment into data center applications as hyperscale customers further adopt deep learning as a new and effective way of processing large unstructured data sets. Any significant decrease in the adoption of deep learning by hyperscale customers or increase in competition could result in downside risk to our revenue and earnings estimates.

Explanation of Equity Research Ratings, Designations and Analyst(s) Coverage Universe:

J.P. Morgan uses the following rating system: Overweight (over the duration of the price target indicated in this report, we expect this stock will outperform the average total return of the stocks in the Research Analyst's, or the Research Analyst's team's, coverage universe); Neutral (over the duration of the price target indicated in this report, we expect this stock will perform in line with the average total return of the stocks in the Research Analyst's, or the Research Analyst's team's, coverage universe); and Underweight (over the duration of the price target indicated in this report, we expect this stock will underperform the average total return of the stocks in the Research Analyst's, or the Research Analyst's team's, coverage universe. NR is Not Rated. In this case, J.P. Morgan has removed the rating and, if applicable, the price target, for this stock because of either a lack of a sufficient fundamental basis or for legal, regulatory or policy reasons. The previous rating and, if applicable, the price target, no longer should be relied upon. An NR designation is not a recommendation or a rating. In our Asia (ex-Australia and ex-India) and U.K. small- and mid-cap Equity Research, each stock's expected total return is compared to the expected total return of a benchmark country market index, not to those Research Analysts' coverage universe.
