Asia Supply Chain Checks Post Q1 Earnings: Raising NVDA PT to $200 as Builds Point to 2H Upside, ASIC/ Interconnect Update, Pull-Forwards Real

We checked in with the supply chain post Q1 prints. Please see our key takeaways below:

Updated Build Implies Upside for Remainder of CY, System Shipments Starting to Tick Up:

Our build points to ~$2B in upside in July for NVDA vs. Street numbers and we raise our Compute estimate to ~$37B from $35.6B prior. Blackwell capacity reached ~30k wafers per month in June (~15 chips per wafer), which was below our prior expectation of ~40k wafers. Despite the short blip, utilizations are healthy, and the supply chain sounds positive on the 2H of the year, which squares with the ramp we are seeing from Agentic AI usage (see our note with Ross Sandler on Agentic AI here). Blackwell capacity increases are still up 30% Q/Q off the lower base, but faster utilization is more than offsetting, giving us more confidence in October. This implies mid-teens Q/Q growth for Compute revenue for both October and January with Hopper and China effectively zero. We raise our CQ3/CQ4 to $42B/$48B vs. our prior ~$40B/~$44.6B and Street ~$40.8B/$46.2B. Blackwell Ultra remains on track with small volume in the supply chain by the end of the Q and mass production set for Q3. We reset total Blackwell ASPs to $35k to account for Ultra in the 2H. Checks in system sales are also improving and we estimate they contribute close to 25% of revenue in July and approach 50% of revenue in October. Both Ultra and higher volume should help GMs in the 2H. Even with the recent run, this name has the most potential upside in our coverage for the 2H and we raise our PT to $200.

T2 Supply Chain Catching Up, TPU Checks Largely Consistent: AMZN Trainium 2 seems to have upticked on both the demand and supply side vs. our last trip and vs. what we heard from Computex. Demand is now over 2M units (vs. prior 2M) with the supply chain able to handle close to 1.5M units (70% of the demand) vs. our March check of ~1.35M. Based on an ASP of $1,500 and assuming the supply chain can only handle 70% of demand, this nets $300M of upside to this year's ASIC number although some likely comes in CY26. 80% of the demand is expected to be met by providers in Q3. For T3, the supply chain seems less certain Alchip is responsible for 3nm alone compared to our last visit. Alchip currently has an engineering sample with the supply chain, which usually takes 6-9 months to turn into production.

TPU checks came in consistent with what we heard during our last trip with V7 hitting the supply chain in May. We did hear that CQ3 is expected up 20% Q/Q (in line with our model). MTK is working on a project which they expect to contribute to revenue in the 2H of 2026. The total revenue opportunity is in the billions, consistent with prior conversations.

One New CRDO Hyperscaler Likely Meta: The supply chain indicated that CRDO's >$800M guide seems conservative when looking at MSFT and xAI ramps, with one partner talking about applications for 800G rack-to-rack connections in the 3-5m range (eventually extending to 8m in the future). We heard that one of the two new hyperscalers outlined in their most recent earnings is META.

Pull-ins Evident Across the Broader Ecosystem: PC ODMs largely missed our estimates in May and left Q2 and full year guides unchanged. Sequential growth was attributed to pull-ins, leaving us expecting subseasonal results for the 2H and a down year in PCs (see our June PC Pulse here). MTK called out H/H weakness across non-smartphone demand due to tariff-related uncertainty and pull-ins in the first few quarters of the year (Street modeling +1% total business H/H). Android revenue is also expected to slow as the bump from the China subsidies peters out. In server, we heard of AI related pull-ins across providers contributing to better Q1 results and above-seasonal expectations for Q2. One source highlighted China customers are securing CPUs first and the accessory components further down the line. For Analog, we are still hearing mixed views with most seeing better than expected results in Q1 and pointing more to a broader recovery versus pull-ins. One supplier pointed to above-seasonal trends for both STM and ON, before subseasonal Q3s.

Our coverage analysts use a relative rating system in which they rate stocks as Overweight, Equal Weight or Underweight (see definitions below) relative to other companies covered by the analyst or a team of analysts that are deemed to be in the same industry (the "industry coverage universe").

In addition to the stock rating, we provide industry views which rate the outlook for the industry coverage universe as Positive, Neutral or Negative (see definitions below). A rating system using terms such as buy, hold and sell is not the equivalent of our rating system. Stock Rating

Overweight - The stock is expected to outperform the unweighted expected total return of the industry coverage universe over a 12-month investment horizon.

Equal Weight - The stock is expected to perform in line with the unweighted expected total return of the industry coverage universe over a 12-month investment horizon.

Underweight - The stock is expected to underperform the unweighted expected total return of the industry coverage universe over a 12-month investment horizon.

Rating Suspended - The rating and target price have been suspended temporarily due to market events that made coverage impracticable or to comply with applicable regulations and/or firm policies in certain circumstances including where the Investment Bank of Barclays Bank PLC is acting in an advisory capacity in a merger or strategic transaction involving the company.

Industry View

Positive - industry coverage universe fundamentals/valuations are improving.

Sustainable Investing Related Research: There is currently no globally accepted framework or definition (legal, regulatory or otherwise) of, nor market consensus as to what constitutes a 'sustainable', 'ESG', 'green', 'climate-friendly' or an equivalent company, investment, strategy or consideration or what precise attributes are required to be eligible to be categorised by such terms. This means there are different ways to evaluate a company or an investment and so different values may be placed on certain sustainability credentials as well as adverse ESG-related impacts of companies and ESG controversies. The evolving nature of sustainable investing considerations, models and methodologies means it can be challenging to definitively and universally classify a company or investment under a sustainable investing label and there may be areas where such companies and investments could improve or where adverse ESG-related impacts or ESG controversies exist. The evolving nature of sustainable finance related regulations and the development of jurisdiction-specific regulatory criteria also means that there is likely to be a degree of divergence as to the interpretation of such terms in the market. We expect industry guidance, market practice, and regulations in this field to continue to evolve.
