Bitcoin, Liquidity, and Macro Crossroads

Liquidity climbs, growth slows; Fed cut nears as BTC fundamentals remain resilient.

- Global liquidity and policy still favor risk-on for bitcoin. Our custom M2 index—which is up ~5% since April and leads BTC by 110 days—is at a cycle high, while September rate-cut odds sit near 80%. We think liquidity expansion should outweigh near-term growth scares for the long-term.
- Macro data show cracks, but they likely hasten rather than derail easing. Sub-50 PMI and a net negative 1M cumulative job revision since 2022 signal slowdown; we think this gives the Fed cover for measured cuts that cushion demand.
- Market sentiment is selective in the short term but constructive in the long term. Investors have punished Q2 equity earnings misses 2x harder than usual while a DXY spike plus slump in the copper/gold ratio flag caution. But we believe that tight HY spreads and rising stablecoin supply indicate risk appetite remains intact once the tariff shock and employment fears pass.
- Onchain metrics point to a healthy foundation for BTC. The following factors pave the road for more upside by late Q3/early Q4: MVRV of 2.5, Puell of 1.3, SOPR > 1, 85% of supply held by long-term wallets, persistent exchange outflows, and limited sell pressure.
